Slow Loris? The Worst Pet in the World!

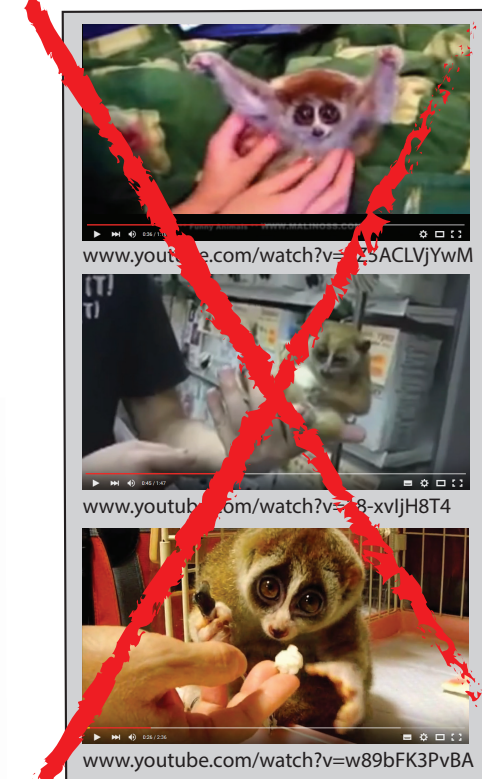

Sharing cute pet videos of slow lorises only supports growth of the illegal pet trade. Spread the awareness instead! Slow lorises belong in the forest and not in a cage. Let's give them a chance to gain their freedom, before it's too late. More information on www.kukang.org/en/i-am-not-your-toy

Greater Slow loris, a unique nocturnal prosimian with poison gland, is among the most endangered primates in the world due to the human desire to acquire slow lorises as pets. This dramatically increases their capture from the wild and illegal sale worldwide. Awareness about the protected status of slow lorises is very little and target owners often have no idea about what a suffering it is for an animal to get from the wild through a market to a cage in their house. The Kukang Rescue Program aims to protect Greater Slow lorises in Sumatra, Indonesia, and to weaken their sale on the black market.

The Kukang Rescue Program has 4 main objectives:

1. Cooperation with local government agencies on enforcement of laws protecting slow lorises.
2. Operation of a rescue and rehabilitation centre for confiscated slow lorises.
3. Raising awareness about the illegal trade in animals and about protection of slow lorises.
4. Building an Indonesian team which will implement most of the conservation activities associated with slow lorises.

Internet campaign "I Am Not Your Toy!" is another activity of The Kukang Rescue Program. This global campaign is focused against the popularization of slow lorises as pets.
